Global smarty within template Closed - Rejected

Within my template every object has a dropdown for the styling (image 1). Currently every object has the same smarty code for setting the styling (image 2).

It would be great if all this smarty could sit in one place where all objects have access to it. We tried adding this at brand level (brand options), but the issue with that is, you can't see the styling in the designer view.

If this is already something we can do, please let me know.

A response on this would be appreciated.
